In 1996, the Summer Olympic Games were well underway in Atlanta. People from all over the world had converged in that city to participate and watch some of the finest athletes in the world competing in twenty-six sports.

Eighteen days into the games, Eric Rudolph detonated pipe bombs at Centennial Olympic Park. The blast killed one person and injured 111 others. It was the first of four bombings committed by Rudolph in 1996 and early 1997. Rudolph eluded capture for years but was finally arrested in North Carolina in 2003. Two years later, he pleaded guilty to all four bombings.

But before anyone knew the name Eric Robert Rudolph, the FBI identified an Atlanta Security Guard named Richard Jewell as a “Person of Interest,” largely because he was something of a loner and kind-of, sort-of fit a profile of a “lone bomber.” The media had a field day with it, portraying Jewell as a failed law enforcement officer who may have planted the bomb so he could “find” it and be hailed as a hero. It was all a false witness.

Once the dust settled, it was clear that Jewell was, in fact, a hero. He had spotted the suspicious backpack, alerted the appropriate authorities, and helped clear the area of spectators in the thirteen or so minutes before the bomb exploded. Without a doubt, the number of casualties was reduced because of Jewell’s actions.

Unfortunately, the damage had already been done to Jewell’s reputation. His name had been forever connected to the Centennial Park bombing, and if you asked people two or three years afterward who the bomber was, inevitably they would mention his name, even though he had been exonerated. In 2019, a biographical movie about Richard Jewell, directed by Clint Eastwood, was released. It may help recover some of Jewell's reputation. Sadly, Jewell died in 2007, so he will never benefit from it.

The Eighth Commandment is simple "You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor." I would guess that most of you were taught in your catechism classes that this commandment is mainly about gossip, that our "false witness" most often has to do with the ways we talk about one another to third parties. That's certainly true, but we cannot overlook the fact that this commandment, in its simplest meaning, has to do with what is said in public courts of justice.

This is exactly what we see in today's Gospel reading.

You will recall that we are working through a sermon series this Lent focused on Jesus' Passion and God's call for us to repent and return to Him. We are looking at several of the events that occurred along the way as Jesus went to the cross for our salvation. We are examining the sins committed. The idea is that these events can help you to recognize your own sinfulness and help you hear God's call to return to Him as a loving word spoken to you as a child of God. He invites you to trust in Him for your salvation, won for you on the cross.

Our Gospel takes us to a dark place. Jesus has been betrayed by Judas Iscariot. The temple guards have seized Him and hauled Him to Caiaphas the high priest, and all of the scribes and elders had gathered. They have decided that they are going to put Jesus to death, presumably in order to protect their own power and position. And they are determined to complete this task by any means necessary:

English Standard Version Chapter 26

59 Now the chief priests and the whole council were seeking false testimony against Jesus that they might put him to death,

It is worth stopping right there to simply ponder that sentence for a moment. They were actively looking for someone to offer lies under oath with the intention of putting Jesus to death. How evil do you have to be that you are willing to seek false testimony in order to kill someone?

But it gets worse:

English Standard Version Chapter 26

60 but they found none, though many false witnesses came forward.

How evil do you have to be that you are willing to offer false testimony, knowingly full well that it is intended to lead to another person's death?

All that aside, these actions clearly conflict with the Eighth Commandment in its most obvious meaning: "You shall not bear false witness against your neighbor" is fire and foremost, about testifying falsely in court against another person.

So we observe the sin that comes out in the trial. But we don't really feel it, not in a personal way, because most of us have never been put in a position where have to testify in court against someone else, falsely or otherwise. But Luther, as he does so well, stretches our understand of the commandment, and in doing so, brings the weight of the Law on us.

The commandment he says, forbids all sins of the tongue by which we may injure or offend our neighbor. He writes:

Concordia: The Lutheran Confessions The Eighth Commandment

For it is a common evil plague that everyone prefers hearing evil more than hearing good about his neighbor. We ourselves are so bad that we cannot allow anyone to say anything bad about us. Everyone would much prefer that all the world should speak of him in glowing terms. Yet we cannot bear that the best is spoken about others.

Our false testimony often consists of the rumors and innuendos that we utter about others people. The whispered did you hears and the murmured you're not going to believes that slip off our tongues. The half-truths and outright lies we speak about brothers and sisters without ever speaking directly to them. The slander and backbiting we too often delight in sharing.

Luther boils it down like this:

Concordia: The Lutheran Confessions The Eighth Commandment

Let no one do any harm to his neighbor with the tongue, whether friend or foe. Do not speak evil of him, no matter whether it is true or false, unless it is done by commandment or for his reformation.

We have all broken this commandment. YOU have broken this commandment. And you are deserving of punishment for that sin. Each of us has, and each of us is.

But God calls you to a different path. He invites you to return to Him. Turn and leave behind your sins of false witness and see that He has something different in mind. God protects your reputation through the kind words others speak about you. And He encourages you to be a part of it.

To know, first of all, that Christ endured all of that false witness in Jerusalem in order to reconcile you to God and win forgiveness for all your false witness. AND second, to empower you to speak the best about others, to help protect their reputations, and always put the best construction on everything. Much like Paul after his road-to-Damascus conversion, when he was empowered to turn from his own false witness about Christ in order to speak the very best about our Lord and Savior.

You can too, and you get to, all because of what Christ has done for you. Return to the Lord your God. Receive His love and forgiveness. Turn aside from your sins and serve the Lord with all your heart. He will never forsake you.

In the name of Jesus. Amen.

- › Now may the peace of God which passes all human understanding, guard your hearts and minds and keep them focused in Christ Jesus our Lord and Savior. Amen.
